NEW ENTERPRISE IN MORRISVILLE

Big Cereal Company May Locate Plant There.

Morrisville, Sept. 18.—At the special meeting of the board of trade, C. E. Gates, a chemist, of New York city, gave a little talk in which he expressed a belief that a company of which he is secretary would consider favorably locating a factory in Morrisville for the manufacture of cereals. This company is organized, and has looked at New Haven and Hartford, Conn., and Buffalo, N. Y., for a place to locate. Mr. Gates is very favorably impressed with Morrisville, and the proposition made him by the board. If the company should decide to locate here, it would mean the erection of a plant costing from $25,000 to $50,000 at the start, and employing from 50 to 100 people, increasing with the growth of the business, until he believes at the end of five years 300 people would be employed. Mr. Gates said the company would want a large quantity of corn, and that it would give the farmers 30 cents more per bushel than the price of western corn. As the business became established, it would put in glass and pottery works, and do canning of corn, peas and beans. If it were to locate in Morrisville, work will be begun early in the spring, and the plant will be ready for operation in the fall.

NO ACTION IN WIRE STRIKE.

The Utilities Commission Has Not the Authority.

New York, Sept. 18.—The striking telegraphers yesterday sent a letter to the New York State Public Service Commission asking the commission to define its powers relative to the telegraph companies. Daniel L. Russell for the strikers also announced that the strikers had decided to request the board of aldermen of New York city to adopt a resolution calling on the telegraph companies to end the strike by agreeing to arbitration. Replying to Russell's inquiry, Public Service Commissioner Bassett wrote this brief reply:

"The law gives the Public Service Commission no power in regard to telegraph companies."

AUTOIST SMASHED TEAM.

Massachusetts Man Never Stopped—The Vermonters Asks for Damages.

Brattleboro, Sept. 18.—Lyman Holden has made a formal demand upon John Cashman of Quincy, Mass., for a settlement of damages incurred Sunday a mile below here, when he ran his touring car into a team containing Mr. Holden and family. The wheels of the vehicle and the axles were broken, and the occupants tossed about. An unusual feature was the attitude of Mr. Cashman, who continued on his way without stopping to learn how much the persons in the team were injured. Mr. Holden telephoned ahead and ascertained the number of the machine, and thus learned its owner.

AMERICA'S MOUNTAINS.

Grand and Greater in Variety Than the Old World's.

North America has suffered shamefully from Alpine arrogance. Its mountains have looked upon glacierless Colorado, the ridges bulging faintly above the continental plateau; upon Popocatepetl and his sister titans reaching isthmusward, upon the snowy dead craters of the Cascades, and pitted us Americans that our lands offered mountain sport for none but women and old men. Volcanoes? An inferior sort of mountain. The Appalachians? Molehills.

But on their continent are fields for climbing greater in variety, wider in appeal to every sort of mountaineer. Alpinist included, than on any other of the world's six areas and among the summits physically attainable probably the hardest in the world. The Himalayas, with greater real elevation, have bases of attack discounting by high, and the accepted idea that thin air prevents climbing above 25,000 feet bars their tops. If South America ten offers greater height and heroic weather, Alaska requires training in a sport quite new; a subarctic Alpinism for which you must persist and endure like a polar traveler, work, ax and rope, cordel or pack carcases across tundras. Its ten or more summits between 10,000 and 20,300 feet present the greatest effective height, the longest snow and ice slopes, in the world. All but Mount St. Elias and Mount McKinley, 20,380 feet, the highest on the continent, are virgin. Mount Logan, 19,500 feet, is the world's remaining Alpine problem. Swiss training alone will not win it. Climbers have avoided Alaska, often accepting challenges from Asia and the Andes. Alpinists must succeed in this ultimate effort or come to judgment for their conduct. A mountain peak only the prohibitive elevation for which you may as well train in a laboratory vacuum.—Robert Dunn in Outing Magazine.

Wind Instruments.

The playing of wind instruments such as the cornet is beneficial to the lungs and is frequently recommended by doctors. If the exertion demanded by the finger instruments is too great, the flute may be adapted with good results.

MAN FOUND IN LAKE.

Body Had Been There a Week—Identity Unknown.

Burlington, Sept. 18.—While the crew of the steamer Vermont were engaged in washing down the decks at Plattsburg Sunday morning the body of a man was discovered in the water a short distance from the steamer. The police were notified, and the remains were taken to an undertaking establishment where they were viewed by hundreds of people, but no one was able to identify them.

Late in the afternoon a woman giving the name of Mrs. Todd called and after viewing the remains said they were those of her cousin, Francis Curran of Willboro, but on Monday a telephone message was received from Francis Curran from Bloomington, N. Y., stating that he was alive and well, notwithstanding the identification.

The drowned man was apparently about 35 years of age, and there was nothing on his person by which he could be identified except a necktie sold by Clark & Donahy. A silver watch and $23.11 were found in his pockets, and at the autopsy it was declared that the body had been in the water about a week. It is supposed that the man was drowned on Labor day.
